

Part 74 frequency coordination needs to remain local until such time the mechanisms and databases necessary for efficient processing have been developed. In small markets with little congestion, there has been a cooperative effort between broadcasters that has worked well. SBE coordination can continue to serve these markets.

Costly changes to the system do not serve the public interest, when the mechanisms are not available. More time is necessary to resolve cost/availability of services issues.